IN THE NEWS

Pacific Mexico LNG Plant Starts Up

Sempra (NYSE:SRE) announced that ECA LNG Phase 1 in Ensenada, Mexico has produced its first liquefied natural gas as part of commissioning toward commercial operations. The joint-venture project with TotalEnergies has a nameplate capacity of 3.25 Mtpa and long-term contracts with TotalEnergies and Mitsui. According to Sempra Infrastructure, substantial completion is expected in summer 2026. For more info go to... <https://tinyurl.com/mspcnfct>

Small Inventory & Hot Temps Boost NatGas

Gains in nat-gas prices accelerated on Thursday amid forecasts of hotter US weather, potentially boosting nat-gas demand from electricity providers to meet the expected increase in air-conditioning use. The Commodity Weather Group on Thursday said that US weather forecasts shifted hotter, with above-average temperatures expected across the Midwest and Northeast through June 13. ... ##### Global LNG Hunt Grows as War Continues

At least nine cargoes initially headed to Europe have changed course to Asia since the start of the fighting, according to ship-tracking data compiled by Bloomberg, with the trend accelerating in recent days. A buffer of spare supply is quickly drying up, threatening more competition and higher prices for both regions. Adding to the turmoil, LNG suppliers, including Shell Plc, are declaring force majeure for customers across Asia due to halted flows from the Middle East, according to people with knowledge of the matter. ...
