'Political will' can lead to accelerated LNG import...

Europe can deploy new LNG import infrastructure far more quickly than in the past when there is the "political will" to do so, a senior official from industry group Gas Infrastructure Europe said April 6. GIE deputy secretary general Roxana Caliminte, speaking during a Eurogas-organized webinar, also said it would be important for Europe to lock in long-term LNG supply agreements to guarantee imports. "We are working in very fast-paced times. We've got to be careful to do things right," Caliminte said. Countries across Europe are currently rushing to secure new LNG import infrastructure as they look to cut Russian pipeline imports, with plans being made to realize numerous projects – both old and new – in record time. Most of the plans are for floating LNG import facilities – known as FSRUs (floating storage an... For more info go to <https://bit.ly/3uis8E4>

U.S. shale gas, LNG firms meet with European...

At least a dozen U.S. shale gas executives met on Wednesday with European energy officials to discuss expanding U.S. fuel supplies to Europe amid a scramble to replace Russian imports. The group met in Houston with foreign affairs and economic ministers and commercial buyers looking to reduce their imports of Russian oil, coal and liquefied natural gas over its invasion of Ukraine, executives said. The European Union plans to cut its reliance on Russian gas by two-thirds this year. read more Delegations from Latvia and Estonia, diplomats from Bulgaria, Estonia, France, Germany, Hungary, Latvia, and the UK toured the Golden Pass LNG export project in Sabine Pass, Texas, and later met in Houston with shale gas producers, said Fred Hutchison, chief executive of trade group LNG Allies. Shell plans major expansion of natural gas project in...

Shell is the lead partner on the LNG Canada project, which began construction in Kitimat, British Columbia in 2018. Courtesy of LNG Canada Shell PLC SHEL-N is studying the feasibility of a major expansion of the LNG Canada joint venture in British Columbia, citing an increase in global demand for liquefied natural gas and the need for new reliable supplies. Europe has been struggling to reduce its dependence on Russian natural gas since the invasion of Ukraine nearly six weeks ago, and countries in Asia want cleaner alternatives to coal. "This reinforces the urgency for increased LNG supply because Europe and the world desperately need it," Wael Sawan, head of Shell's integrated gas and renewables business, said in . ...
